The journey to Bower.

The idea

Suwar quit his employment with the conviction that he had the solution to the over-consumption of plastic and paper bags in retail stores through a deposit system for cotton bags.

The idea developed into PantaPåsen, an analogue deposit system for plastic bags. Teknikmagasinet joined as first customer and PantaPåsen was broadcasted on nationwide news as the world's first deposit system for plastic bags.

When a potential customer (key retailer in the Swedish market) decided to do the PantaPåsen concept themselves after far-going partnership discussions, it stirred the pivot to PantaPå, a digital deposit system for all consumer packaging.

The increased interest from global brands in markets outside of Sweden led to the decision to change the name and brand to Bower.

An award-winning startup highly recognized on the startup scene.

Problem

Our planet is stretched to its limits.

Companies desperately seek ways of decreasing their carbon emissions.

Consumers lack the incentives to do the right thing.

Problem

9%

of plastics get recycled

There is a solution we know works, but it's only for PET bottles and cans – and it's difficult to scale.

◀ Bins

We know that the current solution with trash and recycling bins does not work. Only a fraction of all packaging gets recycled. The majority ends up either as litter or out in nature.

Consumers lack incentives to recycle.

Solution

By combining existing bins with smartphones, we create a modern deposit system that's easy to scale and works for all packages worldwide.

That's Bower.

Solution

World-unique platform increasing recycling by rewarding recycling at existing bins.

All consumer packaging with a barcode can be scanned with the Bower app to yield a deposit value. Through a patented innovative geolocation in-app technology, the deposit value is only retrieved when scanning in close proximity to the GPS coordinate of a recycling bin.

No recycling infrastructure?

In markets that lack a functioning recycling infrastructure, focus will be on decreasing littering, by pinpointing trash bins and other collection points for trash. In addition, over time our system will encourage governments to expand the number of recycling bins.

Recycle everything. Get rewarded. Easy peasy.

Value for scanning only received when the user is in close proximity to the GPS coordinate of a recycling station.

Scan at home.

Use our pre-scan feature to scan all your packages at home.

Go to a station.

You can recycle your packages at any of our recycling stations.

Recycle your packages.

Verify one of your packages when you're at the station to complete your recycling.

Get rewarded.

Now you can use your points to get great deals, redeem money or why not donate to charity?
