

A mobile app to browse video listings of homes for sale.

Existing portals are big, but vulnerable

200m+ monthly active users

- ▶ Actual home sales flat between 5-7m / year

A cultural phenomenon

Not built for entertainment, no innovation

Monthly Active Users

Consumers want more than Zillow can give them

#realestate

2020 2021

11/20

8/21

#housetour + #hometour

2020 2021

11/20

8/21

* TikTok Views Comparison

And agents are embracing this movement

#realtor

2020 2021

* TikTok Views Comparison

We validated the idea on TikTok

Developed app to showcase the potential

A real estate app that's optimized for entertainment

- ▶ Full screen video feed
- ▶ Great music
- ▶ Real data enabling search and details

Early user engagement is strong

Struck a nerve with the Zillow surfers

- ▶ Featured by Product Hunt on August 10

Strong engagement with early fans

Product Hunt Weekly Digest
August 16th, 2021

Zillow meets TikTok

Redfin and Zillow have tangentially benefited from the cultural phenomenon of the real estate market, but have they really leveraged it as the contact machine it is?

HGTV figured it out early. The network's breadth of both offer and competing content propelled it to a top-5 cable network in the US. Competitors like Redfin followed their lead, and also figured out that social media is as much a powerful content generator as it is a distribution channel. In today's world, influencers get contracts to host design shows and popular accounts are adapted to TV shows.

"Real estate is not just a transaction, it's an entire culture," wrote Alex Perelson with last week's launch of PlayHouse. The makers of PlayHouse spotted a gap between all of the home-related content you consume and transactions (RE).

"Maybe you saw an amazing house tour, but it's not in your state?... This one company does incredible work, but they're not in your zip code, and so on it goes... a missed opportunity to connect millions of entrepreneurs and small businesses with potential customers in the real world."

With the PlayHouse mobile app, users can browse video listings like they would TikTok.

"Our vision is a real estate app that is both entertaining and practical. The content is fun and addictive like TikTok, but also practical and actionable like Zillow or Yelp."

Agents want to get in on it

Inbound requests to list on Playhouse

- ▶ Agents from across the US
- ▶ Photography studios serving 1000s of agents

This is a $17B market
opportunity

We sell buyer leads to agents

Annual US agent commissions are ~$98B

- ▶ 6.5m homes sold in 2020
- ▶ ~300k average home price
- ▶ Buyer and seller agents take 2.5% commission each

Agents pay 15–35% of their commission for referrals

- ▶ 25% typical among brokerages

Founders

Alex Perelman

- ▶ Co-founder & CTO @PeerStreet
- ▶ 4x startup founder, 2x YC
- ▶ UCLA MBA, UC Berkeley CS

Nathan Shinder

- ▶ Strategic Ops @PeerStreet
- ▶ Grew rental loans $0 to $40M/mo
- ▶ UC Berkeley, Army Vet

Investors

Y Combinator

Agya Ventures

Goodwater Capital

Nomo Ventures

Adam Nash

Daffy Founder, Wealthfront ex-CEO

Kun Gao

Crunchyroll Founder

Brew Johnson

PeerStreet Founder

Patrick Lee

Rotten Tomatoes Founder

Holly Liu

Kabam Founder, ex-YC partner

Steve Chen

YouTube Founder

Kevin Lin

Twitch Founder

Shiva Rajaraman

WeWork ex-CTO

A generational shift for real estate is here

The future of online real estate is

- ▶ Video first
- ▶ Mobile native
- ▶ Creator driven

